A-2 2026 CAREER LADDER – DEPUTY CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER
Presentation by Steve Delaney, Chief Executive Officer, OCERS

Recommendation: Approve the creation of a career ladder for a Deputy Chief Executive Officer.

CEO Delaney discussed the possibility of creating a Deputy CEO career ladder position that would provide an advancement from either of the two current Assistant CEO positions. He was not asking for a third body, only a third position. Of those three positions, only two would be funded, the Deputy CEO position and whichever of the two Assistant CEO positions that was still filled.

Mr. Delaney related that several public pension systems have recently advanced their Deputy CEOs directly into the CEO position when it opened, rather than go through the time and expense of a national search. Mr. Kim’s recent departure provides an opportunity to create a Deputy CEO position at OCERS, and move our only current Assistant CEO, Ms. Shott, directly into the Deputy position, providing the Board with the opportunity to observe her in action until Mr. Delaney’s future retirement. At that time they would then have the option of advancing the Deputy CEO immediately or undertaking a national search.

The Committee discussed concerns regarding potential workload impacts on Ms. Shott, particularly during the ongoing new building project. Members emphasized the importance of avoiding overburdening key executives during a critical operational period.

Mr. Packard suggested that staff present workload mitigation strategies and timing options for implementation. Mr. Hilton and Ms. Barriga recommended bringing forth compensation comparisons and recommended salary ranges and maintaining a clear salary differential between the CEO and Deputy CEO.

After discussion, the Committee directed staff to return with the requested information at a subsequent Personnel Committee meeting prior to consideration by the full Board, tentatively targeted for April.

Recommendation

Approve and recommend that the Board of Retirement approve the following:

1. Establish a Deputy CEO position, creating a career ladder that provides enterprise-wide oversight of the Finance, Human Resources, and Operational Support Services departments, as well as direct supervisory authority over the Assistant CEO of External Operations, which includes the Member Services and Disability departments.
2. A salary range of $242,021 - $375,159 for the Deputy CEO classification, reflecting a total annual cost of $51,000 (salary and benefits) and an estimated 2026 budget impact of $34,000 (salary and benefits).
3. Authorize the CEO to appoint Brenda Shott as the Deputy CEO, effective May 1, 2026.

Background and Rationale

OCERS is approaching a significant leadership transition period in 2029, when five of the Board's ten seats are expected to turn over, along with my own anticipated departure as CEO. At present, OCERS has no formally identified internal successor, which places the organization at risk of having to conduct a costly and disruptive national executive search at the worst possible time.

Two recent developments have created a timely opportunity to proactively address this risk:

1. My anticipated retirement in 2029 coincides with substantial Board turnover.
2. The recent departure of the Assistant CEO of External Operations created an opening to reassess and strengthen OCERS' executive leadership structure.

Across the public pension sector, several peer systems have successfully addressed similar challenges by establishing a Deputy Director/Deputy CEO model that allows boards to evaluate internal talent over time rather than relying on external recruitment under pressure.

Notably:

- Texas Municipal Retirement System (TMRS) promoted its Deputy Director to Executive Director without conducting a national search.
- Los Angeles County Employees Retirement Association (LACERA) advanced its Deputy Director directly to Executive Director following the CEO's departure, having already observed performance in the role.

These examples demonstrate the value of investing in internal leadership development while preserving future Board discretion.

Memorandum

Career Ladder Concept

The proposed Deputy CEO is a career ladder position, not a new hire. Career ladders are an established OCERS talent management strategy aligned with the Strategic and Business Plan goal to recruit, retain, and inspire a high-performing workforce.

Key features of this career ladder include:

- No increase in authorized headcount.
- When an Assistant CEO advances to Deputy CEO, the vacated Assistant CEO position will remain unfilled and unbudgeted.
- The career ladder provides a structured opportunity for expanded responsibility, organizational exposure, and leadership development without committing the Board to a future CEO appointment.

Proposed Organizational Structure and Workload Considerations

To provide the Committee with flexibility, staff presents three organizational structure options in the attached presentation. Each option maintains the Deputy CEO as second-in-command and differs only in the placement of certain functional areas. All options are designed to allow the Committee to select the structure that best balances executive workload and operational effectiveness; however, Option 2 reflects my preferred approach.

Under all three options:

- The Deputy CEO reports directly to the Chief Executive Officer and serves as second-in-command.
- The Deputy CEO assumes executive oversight of Member Services, the largest division at OCERS, representing approximately 50% of agency staff.
- The Deputy CEO provides executive direction to the Assistant CEO of External Operations once that position is filled.
- The Deputy CEO represents OCERS with internal and external stakeholders and acts as CEO in my absence.

Option 1 – Deputy CEO-Centered Internal Operations Model

Under this option the Deputy CEO provides direct executive oversight of:

- Finance
- Human Resources
- Contracts and Operations Support Services
- Communications
- Enterprise Project Management Office (EPMO)

This option consolidates the majority of internal operational functions under the Deputy CEO, providing the broadest enterprise-wide leadership exposure.

Memorandum

Option 2 – CEO-Retained Communications and EPMO - RECOMMENDED

Under this option the Deputy CEO provides direct executive oversight of:

- Finance
- Human Resources
- Contracts and Operations Support Services

Communications and EPMO remain under the direct oversight of the CEO.

This option reduces the immediate scope of the Deputy CEO’s portfolio while retaining core internal operations responsibilities.

Option 3 – Split Communications and EPMO Oversight

Under this option the Deputy CEO provides direct executive oversight of:

- Finance
- Human Resources
- Contracts and Operations Support Services

EPMO remains under the CEO, while Communications transitions to the Assistant CEO of External Operations once filled.

This option further moderates executive workload while maintaining clear accountability.

Workload Mitigation and Timing

During Committee discussion, members appropriately raised concerns regarding potential workload impacts on Ms. Brenda Shott, particularly during the critical period associated with the new building project. Staff and Committee members emphasized the importance of avoiding overburdening key executives during this operationally intensive phase.

In response, staff proposes the following mitigation strategies and safeguards:

- Phased implementation of expanded duties, allowing selected responsibilities to transition over time rather than immediately upon promotion.
- Retention of project-specific operational support within existing management teams to ensure continuity and prevent executive overload.
- Ongoing workload monitoring by the CEO, with adjustments made as needed during the building project lifecycle.

These measures are intended to ensure that the organization benefits from expanded executive capacity without compromising operational effectiveness during a critical period.

Memorandum

Candidate

Based on tenure, performance, and institutional knowledge, it is my intent to advance Brenda Shott, Assistant CEO of Internal Operations, into this career ladder opportunity. This promotion would build upon her existing leadership responsibilities while deliberately managing the pace and scope of added duties.

Compensation, Internal Equity, and Salary Differentials

At the request of Committee members, staff conducted a compensation review of six peer retirement systems, focusing on Deputy CEO/Chief Operating Officer roles. The analysis confirms that these positions are commonly aligned with General Counsel salary ranges, reflecting comparable organizational responsibility and enterprise-wide impact.

Based on this benchmarking analysis, staff recommends setting the Deputy CEO salary range equal to the existing OCERS General Counsel range:

- $242,021 – $375,159

This approach:

- Maintains internal equity across the Senior executive team.
- Preserves a clear and appropriate salary differential between the CEO and Deputy CEO, maintaining the 10% separation and avoiding compensation compression.
- Positions the Deputy CEO role clearly above the Assistant CEO tier while remaining meaningfully below the CEO salary set by the Board.

If approved, the Assistant CEO of Internal Operations position would move from its current range of $209,445 – $324,637 to the proposed Deputy CEO range noted above.

Budget Impact

- Annual salary and benefits increase: approximately $51,000
- 2026 budget impact: approximately $34,000, assuming a May 1, 2026, effective date (eight months)
- Additional headcount: None

This represents a modest and controlled cost relative to the strategic value of improved succession planning, leadership continuity, and risk mitigation.

Conclusion

Creating a career ladder from Assistant CEO, Internal Operations to Deputy CEO:

- Strengthens executive succession planning ahead of the 2029 transition period.

Memorandum

- Follows a proven model used successfully by peer retirement systems.
- Addresses Committee concerns by incorporating workload mitigation strategies and implementation flexibility.
- Maintains clear compensation structure, internal equity, and appropriate CEO–Deputy CEO salary separation.
- Achieves these objectives with minimal budget impact and no increase in headcount.

For these reasons, staff recommends that the Personnel Committee approve and recommend that the Board of Retirement approve the following:

1. Establish a Deputy CEO position, creating a career ladder that provides enterprise-wide oversight of the Finance, Human Resources, and Operational Support Services departments, as well as direct supervisory authority over the Assistant CEO of External Operations, which includes the Member Services and Disability departments.
2. A salary range of $242,021 - $375,159 for the Deputy CEO classification, reflecting a total annual cost of $51,000 (salary and benefits) and an estimated 2026 budget impact of $34,000 (salary and benefits).
3. Authorize the CEO to appoint Brenda Shott as the Deputy CEO, effective May 1, 2026.

Future Pension Plan Leadership Requires Succession Planning

By Karen Chavez

As the stewards of retirement security for millions of people, pension leaders carry a profound responsibility. Yet many of these leaders are approaching retirement themselves, raising a critical question: who will lead next?

Succession planning is the answer. It isn't only an HR exercise; it's a strategic imperative that ensures continuity, preserves institutional knowledge and safeguards the mission of pension plans.

Succession planning is not a luxury, it's a necessity. For pension leaders, ensuring continuity of leadership and institutional knowledge is critical to maintaining trust, stability and long-term success. Yet, many organizations struggle to define what succession planning truly is — and what it is not.

Succession planning defined

Succession planning is a strategic, proactive process designed to identify and develop future leaders at all levels of an organization. It's about preparing for transitions before they happen, ensuring that key roles can be filled seamlessly when the time comes.

It involves more than naming a successor or creating a list of potential candidates. It's not a single event, but rather an ongoing process that necessitates leadership support to ensure its effectiveness.

Effective succession planning is ongoing, inclusive and integrated into broader employee development and company advancement strategies. Succession planning helps prepare employees to compete during the hiring process. When done well, these efforts demonstrate respect to employees, investing in their growth and signaling their importance in the success of the organization.

The need for succession planning

According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, in 2024 the total workforce consisted of approximately 161 million individuals employed across various industries, with around 38 million aged between 55 and 64 years. The Society for Human Resource Management reports 10,000 baby boomers reach the age of 65 every day. Many of these individuals hold leadership or specialized positions and are expected to retire within five years.

The MissionSquare Research Institute's 2025 State and Local Workforce Report includes similar results from a survey anticipating a major retirement wave occurring within the public sector over the next few years. This prediction isn't new; for years, a "silver tsunami" has been foretold as baby boomers became retirement eligible.

Workforce by Industry, Size and Age

Source: U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics, Labor Force Statistics from the Current Population Survey: Household Data: Annual Averages: Table 18b. Employed persons by detailed industry and age.

When looking at top executives age 55 or older across all industries shown in the graph, more than 4.6 million positions could become available over the next 10 years.

Why succession planning matters for pension plans

Pensions are designed to provide retirement income security. They influence labor markets, savings behavior and capital management. Their economic impacts extend to government budgets, household spending and investments. Leaders of pension plans are responsible for managing billions of dollars in assets, navigating intricate regulations and upholding substantial accountability to their stakeholders including retirees, employees, trustees and taxpayers. It's a big job with a lot on the line.

As pension leaders retire, it elevates the risk of leaving complex and vital economic systems to inexperienced leaders. Continuity of leadership is critical for pension plans due to the complexity, fiduciary responsibility and long-term impact the plans have on financial security for millions of people. Implementing a deliberate plan to address these challenges before an emergency or vacancy fosters stability and trust among stakeholders and staff. It also ensures continuity in strategic initiatives.

New pension leaders must be prepared to handle these management responsibilities:

- Fiduciary and regulatory complexity. Pensions operate under strict compliance frameworks: ERISA for corporate and multiemployer plans, trust law for fund offices and legislative mandates for public systems. Leaders must have deep knowledge of governance, investment regulations and risk management, which takes years to develop.
- Long-term financial stewardship. Decisions made by pension leaders affect decades of retirement benefits. Succession planning must ensure continuity in investment strategy, actuarial forecasting and funding policies to avoid jeopardizing promised benefits.
- Stakeholder relationship accountability. Pension oversight involves multiple stakeholders; boards, regulators, unions and participants. Building trust and credibility is critical, and successors need time to cultivate these relationships. Public systems face additional scrutiny from taxpayers and legislators.
- Specialized skill sets. Future leaders require familiarity in areas like actuarial science and portfolio management and sustainability considerations. These skills are not easily transferable from other industries, making talent development and knowledge transfer essential.
- Extended development timelines. Pension leadership positions often require years of preparation due to the complexity of the plans and the need for institutional knowledge. This makes early identification of potential successors and structured development programs vital.

The High Cost of Not Planning for Succession

Inaction is not neutral; it carries measurable costs that compound over time, making proactive succession planning a business imperative. Failing to implement a succession plan exposes pensions to significant financial, operational and reputational risks. Without a clear strategy for leadership continuity, organizations face issues that can jeopardize fiduciary responsibilities and lead to costly regulatory penalties.

Pension plans that don't undertake succession planning may experience:

- Loss of critical knowledge
- Delayed decision-making
- Reduced morale
- Increased recruitment costs
- Operational disruptions
- Compliance failures

The benefits of succession planning

Implementing a succession plan delivers measurable advantages that strengthen organizational resilience and performance.

By ensuring leadership continuity, pension plans avoid operational disruptions and maintain fiduciary integrity. Succession planning preserves institutional knowledge and critical stakeholder relationships, while proactively developing a talent pipeline equipped with technical, strategic and relationship skills. This approach reduces recruitment costs, mitigates compliance risks and fosters employee engagement by signaling clear career pathways. Moreover, a well-executed plan sustains strategic initiatives, enhances adaptability to regulatory and market changes and reinforces stakeholder confidence.

In short, taking action through succession planning is a strategic investment in organizational stability and long-term success.

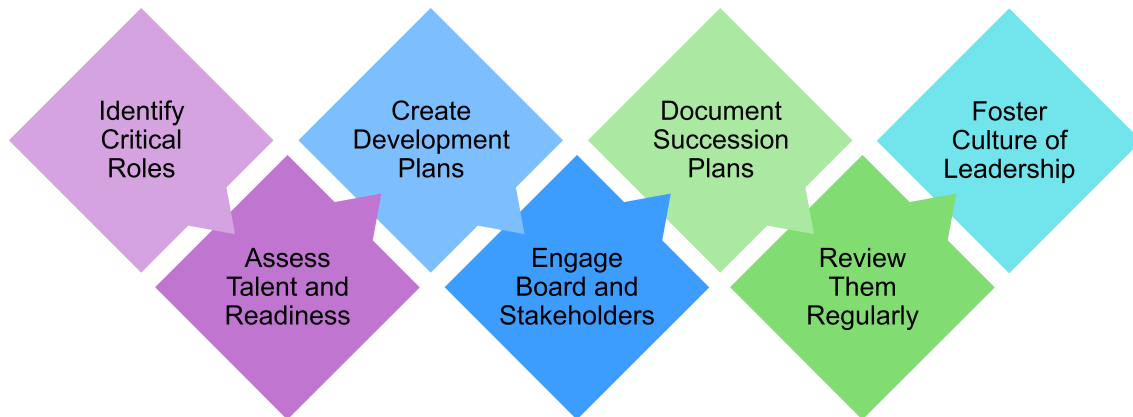

Here are five ways succession planning helps organizations:

1. Ensure leadership continuity during change. Organizations are facing unprecedented changes, such as restructuring, digital modernization or mergers, which may involve shifts in strategy and operations. Succession planning ensures that critical leadership roles remain filled with capable individuals who can steer the organization through these transitions while minimizing disruption.
2. Preserve institutional knowledge. Succession planning helps retain and transfer institutional knowledge, which is vital for implementing change effectively and maintaining compliance, governance and stakeholder trust.
3. Build agility and talent pipelines. Succession planning aligns employee development with transformation goals by identifying future leaders early and equipping them with the competencies needed for the evolving business model.
4. Mitigate risk. Without succession planning, leadership gaps can lead to delayed decisions, operational instability and reputational damage. Proactive planning reduces these risks and supports smoother execution of transformation initiatives.
5. Facilitate cultural alignment. Succession planning requires engagement from boards, executives and employees. When succession planning is integrated into transformation strategies, it reinforces a culture of leadership and adaptability, making change less disruptive.

Key considerations for succession planning

Succession planning may sound easy, but it can be difficult to know where to start.

Focus first on identifying the critical roles that are essential to operational stability and long-term strategies, such as executive leadership and specialized positions. Then assess the talent and readiness of your current staff for leadership potential and skill gaps. Next, strengthen your future bench by creating intentional development plans — through training, mentoring and stretch assignments — and ensure alignment by engaging your board and key stakeholders throughout the process. To maintain momentum and accountability, document your succession plans, review them regularly and keep them responsive to organizational changes. Above all, foster a culture where leadership is encouraged at every level, building a resilient pipeline that secures your organization's future.

Ten succession planning pitfalls and how to avoid them

While succession planning is essential, it can fail if common pitfalls are not addressed. Plans often falter due to lack of executive buy-in, outdated strategies and insufficient development programs that leave identified successors unprepared. Focusing solely on top leadership roles can create gaps in critical positions and hinder organizational growth. Additionally, poor communication and short-term thinking undermine employee trust and strategic alignment.

1. Lack of executive buy-in. Without leadership support, plans fail to gain traction.
2. Overlooking key roles. Focusing only on top executives while ignoring critical operational positions may leave gaps.
3. Failure to update plans. Static succession plans become obsolete as business needs and workforce demographics change.
4. Insufficient development programs. Identifying successors without providing training, exposure to diverse experiences and mentorship leads to readiness gaps and can stifle innovation.
5. Over-reliance on internal candidates. Limiting the pool can result in skill shortages and missed opportunities.
6. Poor communication. Lack of transparency creates uncertainty and disengagement among employees.
7. Short-term focus. Avoid planning only for immediate needs instead of long-term organizational strategy.
8. Neglecting cultural fit. Advancing technically skilled employees who do not demonstrate leadership abilities or alignment with organizational culture may lead to operational challenges.
9. Failure to measure progress. The absence of metrics or accountability to monitor readiness and effectiveness can impede both new hire success and overall organizational performance.
10. Incomplete or unused plans. Having an unfinished or unused succession plan can only deliver partial results at its best.

To avoid these pitfalls, organizations should secure leadership commitment, regularly review and update succession plans, and implement robust training and mentorship programs. Expanding candidate pools beyond internal talent and establishing clear metrics for progress ensures that succession planning remains dynamic, inclusive and effective in meeting both immediate and future organizational needs.

Succession planning doesn't have to be perfect to be powerful

The most important step is to start. Whether you're building a succession plan from the ground up or refining an existing approach, progress begins with intention.

Recommendation

Approve and recommend that the Board adopt the Deputy CEO Charter, formalizing the role, authority, and responsibilities of the Deputy CEO position.

Formal adoption of a Deputy CEO Charter establishes clear authority, reporting relationships, and accountability while supporting organizational continuity and effective executive oversight.

The proposed Charter reflects the Deputy CEO's role as the highest-ranking executive after the CEO and clarifies delegated authority consistent with applicable laws, Board policy, and OCERS' governance framework.

Proposed Charter Highlights

Responsibilities:

Provide enterprise-wide leadership over assigned operational and administrative functions; oversee and coordinate senior executives and departments reporting to the Deputy CEO; assist the CEO in implementing OCERS' Strategic Plan and Annual Business Plan; support organizational development, risk management, and operational efficiency initiatives.

Authority:

Serve as principal deputy to the CEO; act as CEO in the absence or unavailability of the CEO with full authority; authorize expenditures and execute contracts within Board-approved budgets and policies; approve and manage operational and administrative activities within delegated authority.

Operations & Oversight:

Oversee key departments including Human Resources, Finance, Operational Support Services, and the Assistant CEO of External Operations; provide leadership in talent management, internal controls, financial oversight, and enterprise risk management; support delivery of actuarial, financial reporting, and audit functions.

Monitoring & Reporting:

Report significant actions taken under delegated authority to the CEO at least monthly; support timely and accurate reporting to the Board to enable effective oversight and fiduciary governance.

DATE: April 9, 2026
TO: Members of the Personnel Committee
FROM: Steve Delaney, Chief Executive Officer, and Manuel Serpa, General Counsel
SUBJECT: OFF-CYCLE REVIEW OF THE SUCCESSION POLICY

Recommendation

Approve and recommend that the Board adopt the revisions to the Succession Policy.

Discussion

The Board of Retirement has established a review schedule requiring review of every charter and policy every three years. Pursuant to the board-approved review process, the Personnel Committee will first review certain charters and policies before presentation to the Board for approval. The Board adopted the Succession Policy on January 19, 2016, and it was last reviewed on October 20, 2025.

Staff is recommending off-cycle changes to the policy to address and accommodate the proposed Deputy Chief Executive Officer role, which is also being considered by the Committee.

Proposed Revisions

The proposed revisions include adding the Deputy CEO to section 4 as a position the Board will consider appointing as interim CEO in the event of a CEO leave of absence.

Section 9 of the policy, on how the Personnel Committee will proceed if a permanent change at the CEO position is required, was reordered so that a review of the Strategic and Business Plan and an assessment of OCERS needs are the first steps in the process. The requirement for a formal recruitment process was changed to an optional process, with the consideration of whether to promote the Deputy CEO to the CEO position added.

The proposed revisions are set forth in underlined/strikeout text in the attached copy of the Succession Policy. An unmarked version of the Policy is also attached for the Committee's ease of review.
